From the Amsterdam Courant, dated July 23.

Avignon, July 8.

M. Lesley is expected here in two Days: He has been in Spain, and is returning by the Way of Genoa. Being at Barcelona, the Governour desired him to depart the Place; yet during the short time he allowed him to stay there, let him have a Guard for the Security of his Person; otherwise the Barcelonais might have used him ill, as looking on him to have been a Creature of the late British Ministers, to whom they impute all their Miseries. To Morrow the Lord Tullibardine sets out from hence to go to some Italian Courts. He had desired a Pass of the Court of Turin, but it was refused him. One Romanini, an Italian Secretary of the Pretender's, went lately to the said Court of Turin with a Letter of some Importance. The Pretender dined Yesterday with the Pope's Vice-Legate, who has Orders from the Court of Rome to divert him as much as possible, that his Stay here may not cast him into a fetved Melancholy; and for his better Accommodation and Entertainment, the Pope allows him 2000 Crowns a Month extraordinary: Yet the English Jacobites are dissatisfied with the Roman Pontiff, because he treats them in such a Manner as if they were his own Subjects. Next Week a Ld is to be made out of the Irish, Scotch and Irish there, that the Pretenders Friends may [illegible] with those of their own Party [illegible] had some Conference with the Vice-Legate, about the taking of this Ld, with the Vice-Legate would have done by Officers [illegible]

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated July 24.

Paris, July 17. Here is great Talk of a League between the Kings of Spain and Sicily, but for what End, or on what Occasion, is not well known. The Pretender [illegible] some Days, which [illegible] passing from Place to Place [illegible] The Archbishop [illegible] of the Opponents [illegible] of Rome was at Rome [illegible] Pope who was then [illegible] one Day, What if even [illegible] destroy the pretended [illegible] Church? That Prelate [illegible] Perhaps [illegible] speaking at that Time in the Name of France and shall find me ever [illegible] Rights. The Archbishop told this Story in the [illegible] Assembly that sat at Paris on the Constitution. The Archbishoprick of Tours being a Station more Honour than Income, 'tis thought it will be conferred on the Abbot de Louvois, who is offered of Estate enough to keep up the Dignity of that See. We have [illegible] Rome, it on the 25th of last [illegible] with the [illegible] Chevalier (sent thither with a Commission from the Duke of Orleans) had an Audience of Cardinal Paulucci. They were very [illegible] Sides. The Cardinal taking [illegible] Bull ought to be accepted, talked of [illegible] but the Manner in which it might be agreed [illegible] opposed by the Cardinal de Noailles [illegible] to adhere to him: But the [illegible] mainly, that [illegible]

Tenets of the Faith; that the whole Kingdom was in an Uproar about it; and that therefore it behoved the Pope to consider and take new Resolutions. The next Day the Master of the Ceremonies sent out Summons signed with his own Hand to the Cardinals who were in Town, or at their Country Seat, to give them Notice to appear the 27th at Noon in the Quirinal Palace, where a general Congregation would be held in the Popes Presence. The Cardinals appeared accordingly, to the Number of 38: No more than 4 were absent, because they were indisposed, viz. the Cardinals Marescotti, Panciatici, Altieri and Marcelli. The Pope made a long Speech to them, inveighing terribly against what his Holiness was pleased to call exsecrandam Contumaciam Gallorum, the execrable Obstinacy of the French. He said he proposed 4 Points. I. Whether he should give Audience to the Abbot Chevalier. II. In what Manner he should proceed, to take the Hat from the Cardinal de Noailles. III. Whether he should grant Bulls to the Bishops newly nominated, before they explain themselves touching the acceptation of the Constitution. IV. What should be done with respect to the Parliaments and Universities of France. His Holiness enjoyned all the Cardinals to bring every one his Opinion upon these Heads in Writing to a second Congregation appointed to be held that Day Fortnight. He also enjoyned them Secrecy, with Leave however to each of them to consult and advise with two Persons. Since that Time neither the Cardinal de Noailles, nor the Abbot Chevalier, have been admitted to Audience of the Pope. But the Abbot is allowed to [illegible] the Cardinals. The Court [illegible] much dissatisfied with this Proceeding [illegible] have given the Pope to the Month [illegible] to take his Resolution, after which [illegible] what Course will be taken to [illegible] Bishoprics.

Hamburgh, July 17. The Lord Duffus, who was [illegible] on the 7th Instant, by Order of [illegible] British Resident, with the Consent of [illegible] since been carried to [illegible] who is Son-in-Law to the [illegible] Nobleman, having retired from Stockholm (where he acted as one of the Chiefs in the late Rebellion there) to Sweden, alledges that he came from thence with Design to go to Holland, there to implore his Britannick Majesty's Pardon, and to engage Mr. Walpole His said Majesty's Minister at the Hague, to intercede for him: He also says that he communicated this Design of his to Mr. Jackson, the British Resident at Stockholm: Yet we are told, that when he was seized here, there were found about him certain Orders from the Pretender, and from the Lord Mar. The Czar has let at Liberty the two Deputies of the Nobility of Mecklenbourg, whom for their turbulent Behaviour when they had Audience of him, he caused to be confined; and has given proper Directions for embarking to Transport at Rostock all his Cavalry, one Regiment excepted, which is to march to Holstein and embark at [illegible] of that Dutchy. [illegible] of the Czar's Castles have lanched on the Lake of Aland [illegible] be employed [illegible] den with his Army has quitted Norway with great Precipitation, leaving behind him (as for fay) his Baggage and Artillery, because he apprehensive his Bridge would have been fuddenly attacked and burnt. But of this we shall be more certainly and clearly informed by the next Post from Norway. Yesterday the Czar arrived here, with his Fleet of Gallies to the Number of 42, having left 7 of them at Lubeck, to come with other Transports. In the Gallies he brought with him are 8000 Men, which are to encamp with our Troops: The Camp will be formed the 26th Instant, and the most distant of such Forces as are ordered to it, will be there in 5 or 10 Days afterwards. The Czar was received with all the Honours due to his Rank; he supped with his Danish Majesty at the Palace, but went to his own Ambassadour's House to lodge: This Morning his Czarish Majesty was abroad very early, and went to his Fleet without any Attendance.

The following Letter was written by Mr. William Paul to his Grace the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury.

My Lord,

MY Crime for being among the Rebels att Preston, I acknowledge and am heartily sorry, as I ownd att my Tryall. I humbly desire your Grace to interceed with his Majestie to beg my life, which if spared, I promise with a sincere resolution to spend the remainder of it in prayers for his sacred Majestie and Illustrous Familie: I am wholly destitute of friends to implore mercy for me, therefore I do not question but your Generous Temper and Compassion will move you to assist one that had once the honour to be Instituted into a Living in your Diocese of Lincoln by your Grace; I beg leave to assure your Lordship, you cannot bestow your favours on any one that will be more Penitent then he that is with all obedience, your Lordships

Most Humble Servant,

Newgate, June 28. Wm. Paul.

At the same Time he sent the following Letter to the Right Honourable the Viscount Townshend.

My Lord,

ATT my Tryall I pleaded Guilty, throwing my self wholly upon his Majestie for Mercy, to whom I have got a Petition presented to beg my life, promising with a sincere resolution to spend the remainder of it, if spared, in Prayers for his sacred Majestie and Illustrous Familie. But, my Lord, I am destitute of Friends to implore mercy for me; I most humbly intreat your Lordship to interceed for me, trusting to your Goodness, hoping all from you. I beg Leave to Assure your Lordship, you cannot bestow your Favours on any one that will be more penitent, or pray God more heartily for you then, my Lord, he that is with all Respect,

Your Lordships most Humble and Most Obedient Servant,
Wm. Paul.
